changed and clearly the council's position hasn't changed either."

Restaurant rated top Indian

A Bath Indian restaurant has been rated the best in the west. The accolade for the Eastern Eye in Quiet Street comes hard on the heels of it being named Restaurant of the Year by the hospitality organisation Les Routiers.

The family business, set up in 1984, beat another city restaurant, Jamuna in High Street, to the regional title in the first-ever hungryhouse.co.uk English Curry Awards.

The Brunel Raj in Bristol was the third finalist in the regional restaurant of the year section.

Eastern Eye founder Abdul Choudhury said he was "privileged and humbled".

On the venue's website, he says: "We hope to continue to provide a standard of service and class-leading cuisine that ensures our continued appreciation from both customers and critics alike."

Manager Shaun Choudhury
